Basil the Great and Gregory of Nazianzus, bishops, teachers of the faith, 379 and 389

Basil the Great, 329-368. Eldest son of Christian parents from Asia Minor. He visited monasteries in Syria, Egypt, Palestine and Mesopotamia, spent a period as a hermit and founded a monastery on the River Pontus. He assisted Bishop Eusebius for some years and then succeeded him. He defended orthodoxy against Arianism and established the Basilica, a hospital for the sick and poor which became a model. His influence affected both Eastern and Western churches.

Gregory of Nazianzus, 329-390. Friend and colleague of Basil the Great. When Basil went to help Bishop Eusebius of Caesarea, Gregory went home to help his father who was Bishop of Nazianzus. He later became patriarch of Constantinople. He is celebrated, with Basil, as one of the Fathers of the Eastern Church.

Saturday 10 January

William Laud, archbishop, 1573-1645

Leader of the High Church Party, opposed to the Calvinistic practices being adopted in the C of E. His views were close to those of Charles I in whose reign Laud became successively Bishop of Bath & Wells, Bishop of London and Archbishop of Canterbury. He sought obedience from the clergy, refused to ordain men who engaged in itinerant preaching rather than ministering to parishes and insisted that the altar should be moved from the centre of the church and placed at the east end where it would be a focus of worship. But when the Long Parliament met in 1640, the Earl of Strafford and Laud were both impeached for treason. Strafford was executed and, after four years in prison Laud too went to the scaffold.

His knowledge of Benedictine life was valuable, after the Synod of Whitby, when English, Welsh and Scottish monasteries were changing from the Celtic to the Latin Rite. Biscop made six journeys to Rome, bringing many cartloads of books, sacred pictures, vestments and a chanter who taught Gregorian plainsong. He founded the monastery at Monkwearmouth.

*St Kentigern (Mungo) missionary bishop, 518-603
George Fox, founder of the Society of Friends
(Quakers), 1624-1691*

Kentigern was said to have been the son of a Scottish princess who, refusing to name her lover, was thrown from a cliff overlooking the Firth of Forth. But she and her child survived and Kentigern was brought up by a monk who called him Mungo or 'darling'. He became a Celtic monk, so honoured in the Strathclyde region that the people asked that he should be their bishop. He lived into his eighties and St Mungo's Cathedral in Glasgow commemorates him as first Bishop of Glasgow.

George Fox, son of Puritan parents, left home at 21 and, with other Friends of Truth became convinced that the True Light illuminated all who sought it without the need for clergy, churches or formal prayers. They refused to bear arms, pay tithes or swear oaths. They faced persecution from landed gentry, clergy and magistrates, and endured beatings and repeated imprisonments. Many went abroad and George Fox travelled to North America and the West Indies preaching to a growing movement. After The Toleration Act of 1689 these peaceful people were allowed to worship freely in England.

Antony sold his family estates, gave the money to the poor and lived for 13 years in a disused cemetery in Upper Egypt before moving into the Arabian desert. Other solitaries came to live near him and he founded two monasteries on the Eastern pattern where the monks lived alone but came together for worship and meditation. He travelled through the mountainous rural areas re-opening churches and finding priests to serve them. In 1602 he became Bishop of Geneva. A gentle and sensitive priest, he became renowned as a spiritual director and many of his pastoral letters survive. His treatises "On the Love of God" and "Introduction to a Devout Life"

Anglican Communion Diocese of Limerick & Killaloe (Province of Dublin, Ireland), The Revd Canon Kenneth Kearon, clergy and people.
Tracing its origins to St. Patrick and his companions in the fifth century, the Irish Church has been marked by strong missionary efforts. In 1537, the English king was declared head of the Church, but most Irish Christians maintained loyalty to Rome. The Irish Church Act of 1869 provided that the statutory union between the Churches of England and Ireland be dissolved and that the Church of Ireland should cease to be established by law. A General Synod of the Church, established in 1890 and consisting of Archbishops, Bishops, and representatives of the clergy and laity, has legislative and administrative power. The Church of Ireland covers the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland. There are 12 Dioceses. Total population is 3.8 million of whom only 400,000 are Anglicans, with 450 parishes and 500 clergy.

Timothy, described by Paul as 'my loyal child in the faith' accompanied Paul on his missions to Philippi and undertook missions to other Greek cities. He was with Paul when the Letters to the Philippians, the Colossians and the Thessalonians were written, and he is mentioned in all three. Paul's two Letters to Timothy were written when Timothy was in Ephesus and may have become the bishop. One record says he was killed at Ephesus. Titus was a Greek, who worked with Paul at a later stage in his ministry and was sent to a number of churches in Greece and Dalmatia. The Letter to Titus is written to him in Crete but there is some doubt about its authenticity. Eusebius records that Titus eventually became Bishop of Crete.

He went to Paris and later to Cologne where he developed the scholastic system of thought set out in his "Summa Theologica" (22 volumes in the English translation).
